Marcello has everything, including a title he never uses. It seems a smart ancestor won a bucket of ducats and a drunk of Europe for marrying a king's ugly sister.

Among his passions is motorcycle sport; his brand is Yamaha, of course. Retired champion many times over, he keeps boredom at arms length with his collections of vintage cars, exotic plants, female companions, and by encouraging world class motorcycle polo.

His wardrobe is classic; fashion magazines ask him what's new. His wardrobe of Yamaha motorcycles and sportswear mix or match to suit his mood. Cello rubs well tailored elbows with the best, so he recognizes an outstanding label when he sees one. He knows a man is judged by the company he keeps, so he makes certain he is surrounded by Yamaha quality.

Walter, the motorcycle superhero, often reflects on how it was that Yamaha almost caused him to lose the Paris-to-Pakistan Invitational Trials.

There he was ripping over the mountains with no more trouble than climbing the front steps, leaving the rest of the pack wandering around Europe like a flock of lost sheep.

The problem occurred when there was a border to cross. He may have been first to the check point but the guards spent so much time looking over his Yamaha gear, feeling the material, and asking questions, he was always the last to leave. Does dressing like a winner make it impossible to be one? Almost. Will Walter make it back to Paris? Will he ever forgive Yamaha? More adventures of Walter's trials with Trials on the Specialties page.

Brewster dreamed of being a rancher, tall in the saddle, where the deer and the antelope play. After years of boardroom battle, the corporate general retired to 500 acres in the snow country, with enough cattle, year 'round skiing, and privacy to keep him busy.

Running a ranch is like any other business. He set up a quality system and sat back to play Land Baron. His Foreman, Mac, is no ordinary cowpoke; the ponies are new Yamaha bikes, and the ranch hands are all college boys.

The rustlers ride snowmobiles while the cowboys sit by the camp fire in arctic-tested Yamaha winter wear listening to cassette tapes. Brewster and Mac gladly give up the old days for the new. They look for the best product to put a brand on. Just like Yamaha does.

When Francie was in high school, she was nearsighted, and so thin, when she stood still, she was often mistaken for a floor lamp. Why folks paid so little attention to her, she'd already graduated from a big city college before anyone knew she was gone.

Things have changed some since Francie's back. Folks say she owns most of the county now, and is looking hard at the next one. She buys all her clothes in Paris and makes all her business calls on her new Yamaha.

Could be the contact lenses, the Masters Degree, or the South American tycoon she pals around with that changed her. Most likely, it looks like she made a few good investments, like the silver Yamaha helmet she wears. She's protecting more than an expensive hairstyle.

Yamaha Track Graphic helmet color selection.

Charlie hung up the "Gone Fishing" sign in the grocery store window, but the folks all knew better. He was plain tired of watching haircuts, graduations, and the leaves turning brown. This time he dressed up his new XS-11 and went on the road.

It got a little lonely out there with just the jack rabbits and the 18 wheelers for company. Especially since he'd been across the country more times than the air mail.

He met Simone standing beside her broken red sports car. She said she wouldn't mind riding a ways with him. And they and the Eleven have been together ever since. An exciting conclusion to this saga will follow. Will Old World frugality keep Simone in her place on the passenger seat? Or is there a Yamaha in her future?

Simone got her very own Yamaha, of course. Not only does she love to ride her 750 for pleasure, but being the frugal business lady, she makes all of Charlie's deliveries on it.

The store's a little different now that Simone comes in every day. There's blue and white curtains in the window and folks come from all around to get a taste of her homebaked French bread. She's thinking of opening up a place nearby where she can try out some of the country cooking that Charlie likes so much.

She and Charlie are always pretty busy, but the wide open spaces are in their blood. Now they both know they like going as much as stopping. So in the Fall, at the drop of the first brown leaf, they hang up the "Gone Touring" sign, get out the maps, pack plenty of provisions and slip a coin.

Gunnar and Willie hail from the cold country. When they were just kids, matching frozen knuckles on the playground, they made a pact. When they were old enough and big enough, they'd get some Yamahas and head south for Old Mexico.

All one summer they worked double shifts and ate peanut butter sandwiches to finance those bikes. At the first hint of winter they bought a pair of slicked-up Yamahas, and were southward bound.

They spend a lot of winter afternoons rating Mexican sunsets. Last we heard, Gunnar had found a real "doll," and Willie's learning to habla espanol from Maria. The coldest thing they have to look forward to is tall, frosty, and served with lime juice. Yamaha just keeps making the good life so much better.

Of course Walter, the motorcycle superhero, won the Paris-to-Pakistan Invitational handily, thanks to race proven Yamaha products. 15,000 kms and the bike was still like new. He wasn't ungrateful, but he'd like Yamaha to let him know why it was he could get all the way across Europe and Asia, but couldn't even get out of the Paris Airport?

Seemed like the customs man had the same problem those border guards did. There was Walter, pacing around like an expectant father, staring a hole in his watch, while the inspector looked through his gear for the fifth time.

Yamaha always sends its congratulations to winners such as Walter, along with its regrets for the inconvenience. For those who like to win, they just better be prepared to enjoy the applause.

Old motorcycle yarn spinners just love to tell stories about the legendary Kel, master Yamaha mechanic. They say, when Kel was just a tot he took apart two of his mother's clocks and made three. All of them still keep perfect time. Or the one about his lady friend who told him she didn't care to see him any more. That night he dismantled her car and reassembled it in the lobby of her apartment.

Yamaha racing teams worldwide call for Kel, and occasionally you can see he and the "magic" tool box slip aboard a private jet to tune some scooters for an oil slick.

When Kel announced the magic was really in his tool box, you should have seen the stampede just to get a look at it. Kel's legendary skill depends on the quality assurance of genuine Yamaha parts. Amazing that Yamaha.

Klaus the chemist is a laboratory superstar, internationally known for his formulas. The walls of his workspace are awash with prizes, plaques, and letters from grateful governments for saving their oceans, air, and sundry resources.

Always the victim of his own curiosity, he stumbled on Yamaha lubricants and paints at his dealer one day, and ever since, he has tried to improve them. To no avail.

One time he thought he had it. He proudly announced, after months of testing, a new improved Yamalube. The story goes, after careful deliberation by Yamaha R&D, the reports were conclusive. The Klaus formula did not improve the world's best two-cycle racing oil, but it did make a pleasant light table wine.

PAINTS & LUBES

- 1 Tire Mounting Lube saves temper and fingers. Tire Sealer heals most minor road wounds; $1.95 each.
- 2 Electric Contact and Sparkplug Cleaner keeps motorcycle in top operating condition. Easy spray on, cleans and disappears; $1.95 for a 7 ounce can, $2.35 for the 13 ounce large, economy version.

It was no surprise when Dan the Yamaha Dealer was elected Businessman of the Year. From the time he opened up in the back of Pop's Garage, he and Yamaha have been as popular as three day holidays. Dan doesn't claim to any kind of marketing genius, he's just got a talent for listening. He makes sure his very special people get the kind of quality they can expect from Yamaha.

From the old time tourer who wants to spend a whole Saturday morning to tell about 50 years on the road; to the small fry hanging around for race decals, he lets them know how special they are.

Dan made a big investment. He thinks giving away a few Saturday mornings and a few decals, are all a part of securing it. Very special person, that Dan.

THE PERFECT CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR KIDS. NO MATTER HOW OLD THEY ARE!

DT100 Like our YZ100, this 98cc dual-purpose machine fits right between mini and full-size. A tough, reliable bike that can handle dirt with agility and pavement with ease.

There are plenty of kids—including the little bit of kid in all of us—who would love to find one of these bikes under the tree this year.

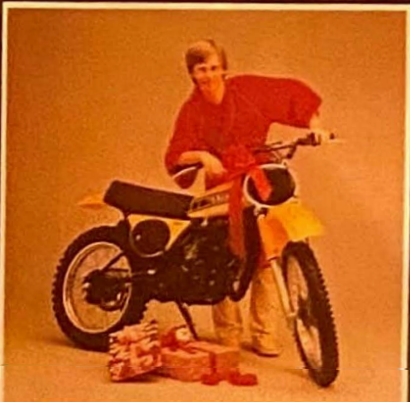

Some of these machines are ideal for the beginner or less experienced rider. And all are as technologically advanced as any in the Yamaha line. They have our patented Torque Induction engines; easy-shifting transmissions; tough tubular steel frames; and, except for the YZ80, our exclusive Autolube System that automatically mixes gas and oil.

And they're priced to make it a Merry Christmas for the giver as well as the receiver.

YZ80 This is a genuine 79cc motocross racing machine, with leading axle front forks and Yamaha's exclusive Monoshock rear suspension system, just like its big brothers.

YZ100 We make this 98cc dual-purpose machine for those in-between kids—too big for a mini, too small for a 125. It's a real winner, too, with performance that's anywhere but middle-of-the-road.

DT125 & DT175 Full-sized dual-purpose motorcycles for full-sized kids. Both of these machines are equipped to take anything a city street or a country trail can dish out.

Chappy Spare tires for mom. So she can go to the post office, hairdresser, drug store, wherever, without juggling the situation, baggy, along. An automatic transmission makes it even easier.

GT80 A 72cc dual-purpose bike for on and off road riding. The GTMX is a tough motocrosser with long travel front forks and heavy duty rear shocks. Tough enough for any kid.
